New Eurovent certification programme - Indoor Air Quality and Energy Efficiency of Ventilation Systems (IAQVS)

General information on the development of the certification programme

The following section provides an overview of certification programme development process in relation to the IAQVS programme.

Proposals on new projects

Based on the feedback from manufacturers and market evolutions the ECC team investigates opportunities for new certification programmes. Following this approach, a lack of comprehensive programme combining energy efficiency and Indoor Air Quality was identified.

Information meetings

The initial ideas for a programme are presented at so called information meetings. These meetings also aim at the exchange about the possibility to set a related certification programme. The meetings are freely accessible to all manufacturers which would be concerned. The manufacturers can then decide if they would wish to join a Launching Committee.

The information meeting about a new programme for Indoor Air Quality and Energy Efficiency of Ventilation Systems (IAQVS) took place on 5 February 2019.

Launching Committees

If the proposal to set up a new programme is endorsed, a Launching Committee is established. Within the Launching Committee, the reference documents for the certification programme are prepared. The Launching Committee meetings are open only to the manufacturers that sign a declaration of commitment and pay a fee to participate.

The first Launching Committee meeting on IAQVS took place on 17 April 2019.
